CONTEXTUAL SUMMARY: OLD NARRATIVE, NEW HEROES

In May of 2024, the Board of Directors and the Swamp Staff decided that it was in the best interest of both parties for Swamp Corps to separate from Swamp Camp Services, Inc., its former parent organization, and be its own independent entity. In response, a new organizational concept precipitated with a global, missionary mindset utilizing Swamp Corps as its initial core program. This concept emerged from the ongoing, historical narrative involving the generations: The Older Generation and the Next Generation and the cyclical transition that has rolled through the ages during which the missional collaboration between the two has been non-existent or unsustainable. The narrative needs a catalyst that can stir heroes to action towards a sustainable and productive collaboration. That catalyst is Swamp Camp Mission Alliance (S.C.M.A.) conceived with the expectation that two prominent features, its name and its mission, would convey a clear message of its intent, its objectives and its positioning in the broader Christian missionary context and historical narrative while offering a present-day solution. (By the way, when you read S.C.M.A., say ‘schema’ as in we are offering the generations a new “schema” in missions outreach.) In regards to the organization’s name: “Swamp Camp” is a globally-recognized brand name representing a spiritual and fun-filled overnight camp culture that has existed for over three decades and speaks to the Next Generation offering a safe, spiritual space for belonging and learning through play, connection, community, and wonder; “Mission Alliance” evokes high levels of partnership strength towards a common objective. The S.C.M.A. Mission Statement brings these elements into sharp focus. Simply stated our mission is

Partnering with God to Bridge the Generations and fulfill Psalm 72:5

We want to accomplish something that has rarely been sustainably done in Judeo-Christian history: the Older Generation and Next Generation—the key characters in our narrative—working together for a common cause with equal levels of engagement, inspiration, and convergence of spirituality, common purpose, and faith-in-action. The setting to our narrative is Swamp Corps with its 15-year proven path of establishing and sustaining camp cultures around the world where ever its invited. It is a backdrop where the Next Generation shines finding belonging and learning; a place parallel in mission with- and separate from their “parent’s church.” A developing subplot and accompanying program in the narrative is S.A.L.T. (Swamp Academy for Leader Transformation). S.A.L.T.’s objective is to provide targeted training to each of the Generations in order to begin the Bridge Building process.

Every great story needs a main character: for a Swamp, it is the campers; for Swamp Corps, it's the counselors. Great stories also need heroes and Swamp Camp Mission Alliance has theirs: the Investors who desire and dream to see the gospel of Jesus everywhere for everyone leaving a legacy of Christian faith and who long for the rise and mobilization of servant-leadership in the Next Generation giving young people an alternative for moral enrichment, growing leadership skills, and space to advance Jesus' kingdom across the globe; there is also the amazing Staff of S.C.M.A., whose behind-the-scenes heroics are both tireless and endless.

S.C.M.A. exists to perpetuate this dream in the face of competing requests and desires providing a legacy opportunity for Investors that will allow the young the chance to find belonging and learn the Christian faith and to become those who serves others and pass on Jesus' teachings to the next generation who, in turn, will pass it on to the next generation, and so on. Just a couple of years after Swamp Corps started, Jennifer Rorabaugh made an insightful, albeit back-burner, observation. She said, "the older generation planted churches; this generation will plant camps." The stage has been set; it is time for the heroes to converge with the main characters for one mission working in tandem in their own way to see this "prophecy" realized while the young are young; then they will grow to be church-planters keeping the missionary spirit alive and progressing.

S.C.M.A.'s main program, Swamp Corps, is its generative arm dedicated to duplicating the Swamp Camp culture where ever its invited ensuring the host location will have its own perennial camp after a three-year training program; its mission is to see a Swamp Camp reasonably reached by every child on the planet that provides the next generation space to belong, become, and bequeath.

Our passion is the youth and giving them an opportunity to see and experience God and the teachings of Jesus. We can't do it alone. We need the Older Generation; we need their resources: ideas, embrace, prayers, wisdom, and money. We also need them to create space for new ways of engaging and mobilizing the Next Generation; to open up their minds, hearts and mouths to an alliance with them. Once space is created, S.C.M.A. has something to fill that space: Swamp Corps. We need the Older Generation to embrace the Swamp Corps model promoting it, sponsoring it, perhaps even making it a personal, congregational, or organizational mission field.

Swamp Camp Mission Alliance's primary purpose is to bridge an alliance between the generations in order for Swamp Corps' primary purpose to thrive: establishing a perennial Swamp Camp where ever invited that provides a place where kids feel physically, emotionally, mentally, and spiritually safe enabling them to discover God on their own in a loving and judgment-free space. This was its genesis; this is its genius; and this remains its primary focus. Swamp Corps is growing and continues to entertain new invitations each year. Thanks be to the Spirit. All growing organizations need four nutrients: energy, ideas, money and time. Successful organizations manage those resources efficiently and productively. S.C.M.A. is faced with some key questions in its infancy, which will determine how it can best manage the business and ministry facets of its operations. How can Swamp Corps stay the course and yet pull in the Older Generation bridging generations? How can we engage the Older Generation while mobilizing the Next Generation? How can we sustain a Swamp Camp culture while growing in locations? How do we sustain and increase investments in proportion with mission growth?

In essence, how do we balance business with ministry and keep ourselves accountable to God and our stakeholders?

This paper offers a summary of the contextual meanings of (revealed by way of answers to expository questions below) and the comprehensive solution for such a question without---alert notice---adding too much to blur, distort, or remove the primary objective AND yet identify, refine, and improve the complications that tend to come with growth and eat away external trust and internal togetherness.

I. REFINED KEY QUESTION

Is there an actionable way of thinking expressed via a well-suited management system that will:

- Further the S.C.M.A. Mission,
- Relentlessly protect Swamp Corps' unique spiritual camp culture,
- Propagate S.A.L.T.'s unique Bridge Building training,
- Consistently serve and provide meaningful value to its stakeholders,
- Inspiringly focus all of its personnel on fulfilling the S.C.M.A. Mission, and
- Establish a thriving thought leader brand?

II. EXPOSITORY QUESTIONS

To provide a comprehensive answer to this key question requires a basic understanding of the answers to the following germane operational, value-based, stakeholder-focused questions; the assembly of said answers will offer the solution we seek.

1. Why do we exist?
 2. What is our mission: simply stated and easily explained to a stakeholder?
 3. Who are our Stakeholders and what model best helps us to understand the shared relationship with them?
 4. Who and/or what is our market and what is our market position?
 5. What is our market position goal?
 6. What is our road map for creating and sustaining value?
 7. How do we concisely and precisely articulate the value offered to each stakeholder?
 8. What drives our operational thinking?
 9. What are our policies, practices, and expected behaviors to create a container for productive work?
 10. How will we conduct Mission Plan Reviews expressing setbacks and successes to continuously improve the management system solution and objectives while ensuring we consistently and precisely determine our next best step?
 11. How do we monitor and maintain expectations and camp culture across each camp established via Swamp Corps?
 12. How do we remain consistently Spirit-led?

III. EXPOSITORY ANSWERS

1. Why Do We Exist?

To create a legacy path for the Older Generation to carry on the Christian faith while building bridges with the Next Generation in a common missional cause.

2. What is Our Mission: Simply Stated and Easily Explained to a Stakeholder?

Partnering with God, Bridging Generations to fulfill Psalm 72:5.

“Partnering with God”

- Partnership with the Almighty is essential.
- Partnership drives collaborative thinking.
- Partnership keeps us increasingly in step with the Spirit.

“Bridging Generations”

- Strengthening the connection between the Older Generation and the Next Generation.

- Older Generation: Those over 50 who are (were) church planters and sustainers who want to see the gospel message continue. Could be individuals, mission societies/associations, churches, house churches, small groups, Christian civic organizations and the like.
- Next Generation: Anyone not in the above.

“to Fulfill Psalm 72:5”

- “May endure as long as the sun, as long as the moon, through all generations.” Psalm 72:5
- By way of our two programs: Swamp Corps and S.A.L.T. (Swamp Academy for Leader Transformation)

Swamp Corps Mission

Partnering with God and the Next Generation to establish a perennial Swamp Camp wherever invited.

Transforming and Partnering Generational Leaders

- Summary: S.A.L.T. is more than a leadership initiative. It's a movement of transformation raising up a generation that doesn't just serve the Kingdom, but helps shape it and continues its legacy. Born from the heart of the Swamp Corps summer camp culture, S.A.L.T. exists to guide Kingdom Kids into becoming Kingdom Leaders, rooted in identity, equipped with purpose, and awakened to their role in Jesus' New World Order (Psalm 2). The journey doesn't stop there! S.A.L.T. also calls Kingdom Leaders of the Older Generation to become Kingdom Partners, men and women who no longer see the younger generation as "the next" but as "the now," walking hand-in-hand in the mission of Christ. Armed with a re-aligned mindset of partnership, they will lead the effort of engaging and mobilizing the young servants. This shared transformation becomes a bridge, a sacred structure built from both sides, closing the generational gap and creating space for shared vision, mutual trust, and lasting impact.

3. Who are Our Stakeholders?

Before identifying stakeholders, consider the Socio-Ecological model (introduced in the 1970s) that provides a framework highlighting the importance of working across levels to address the various factors that influence both individuals and populations. This model considers the complex interplay between individual, relationship, community and societal factors in human behavior (Figure 1). The theory is that the individual does not exist in a vacuum and that his/her behavior both influences and is influenced by the surrounding environment. This model helps Swamp Camp Mission Alliance best illustrate its focus and methodology as it frames the context of the different connections that this new mission outreach schema helps strengthen and/or build: primarily for the hero of our story, the Older Individual (main focus of S.C.M.A.), and secondarily for the relationships, community, and societal environments in which these individuals connect and live throughout their Christian lives.

The S.C.M.A. Socio-Ecological Model illustrates the connections that exist and helps identify key stakeholders. S.C.M.A. stakeholders include: 1) Older Individuals; 2) Christian Organizations; 3) Swamp Corps; and 4) the Younger Generation. The resources provided by S.C.M.A. channeled through Swamp Corps and S.A.L.T. bridge the generation gap and carry on a Christian legacy unprecedented in modern history (we think!). How? S.C.M.A. bridges connections between older people, young adults, and kids in a way that supplements what church ministries accomplish locally and parallels what the Older Generation amazingly accomplishes in church plantings during the past and present decades. Older Christians need and want help creating space for the younger generation and seeing significant contributions to Christian growth at large. S.C.M.A. works to bridge gaps between key stakeholders to build and strengthen Christian faith and values in children and for generations to come. The primary focus of our Mission ripples through the stakeholder connections exhibited in this model.

S.C.M.A. Stakeholders:

Investors:

- Older Individual – 50 plus year olds who have been Believers for some time and/or who 1) want to rekindle their passion for the Jesus' last instruction and 2) who long for a sustainable Christian legacy plan.
 - Christian Organizations – This can be a mission society or association, a church, a house church or small group, or a Christian civic organization to which an older Christian is loosely or tightly connected, whose mission is to see the teachings of Jesus spread and that displays a passion for the next generation.

Partners:

- Swamp Corps Staff & Volunteers – Utilized in S.C.M.A.'s training process providing a new schema furthering mission outreach.
- S.A.L.T. Staff & Volunteers – Utilized in S.A.L.T. training process providing new partnerships between the Older and Next Generation.
- Younger Generation – those who comprise the Next Generation (Millennials, Gen X, Gen Y) and who will take on the banner of the Christian faith establishing camps and influencing the next generations.

Through the mission alliance of the Older and Next Generations, Swamp Camp Mission Alliance and its programs can impact the faith of many people not only in this generation but also for future generations to come.

4. Who and/or What Is Our Market and What Is Our Market Position?

It may be a bit uncomfortable to use the secular word ‘market’ in our realm, and yet we must invite this word in for tea so we can grow comfortable with its conceptual basis and allow it to find its place in our mindset and vernacular. It is easy to think that our market is the current youth-based humanitarian industry filled with all possibilities from Children International to Save The Children to Americares, and many more. While these do compete with stakeholder attention, it is imperative to understand that our real market is each individual stakeholder reflected in our socio-eco system model and the value they perceive and receive from us. An organization cannot aspire to a unique market identity if it is focused on its competition, real or perceived, more than its own beliefs and values—the very things any consumer or stakeholder desires. S.C.M.A. is no different.

With this in mind, we must understand our position in the minds of our stakeholders regarding the value we offer each of them.

To do this we utilize a framework (depicted above) designed by Mel Abrahams to explain and grasp marketing position via levels of sophistication and the Thought Leader Connection associated with each level; the goal of which is to ever-increasingly explore higher levels (Levels 4-5) while exploiting Levels 1-3, eventually placing S.C.M.A. in the minds of our stakeholders as having a unique genius and experience they desire more than all other alternatives. (To learn more, it is recommend that one attend a Mel Abrahams' Marketing Workshop.)

Initially, in Level 1, an organization makes a claim about their product or service (i.e. "We can help you lose weight."). Soon after in Level 2 the organization amplifies this claim in an attempt to differentiate itself (i.e. "We can help you lose weight and still eat the foods you want."). Level 3 presents the process of highlighting a proprietary mechanism in an attempt to further differentiate themselves (i.e. "We can help you lose weight and still eat the foods you want using our 30-day plan."). A climb to Level 4 escalates the organization to a position of clout and influence such that the consumer is now convinced to turn away from any other alternative and begin considering ways of marketing the organization's product or service themselves. The ultimate goal, achieved in Level 5, happens, when in the minds of the consumer, the organization offers the go-to product or service and is seen as the one, unique supplier to meet their needs.

A Thought Leader looks at each of the levels with the desire in mind to determine what actions are needed to differentiate the organization in such a manner that these steps cumulatively lead to Level 5 by asking the following questions at each level of marketing thought:

- Level 1: What is our portfolio of intellectual property (IP) which supports our claim, in our case: our mission and values?
- Level 2: What proprietary processes do we have that amplifies the claim?
- Level 3: What unique methodology can we offer that no other alternative can?
- Level 4: What value do we offer a stakeholder which elevates us to an influential (prevailing) position?
- Level 5: How distinctive is this Level 4 value which will propel us in the mind of our stakeholders to be seen as the one-and-only who can meet their need?

For each stakeholder, we must evaluate our market position level. Until that analysis is completed, a general overview of our current market position is as follows:

- Level 1: We offer our stakeholders an opportunity to become heroes by joining a unique alliance bridging generations. As a hero, they perpetuate Jesus' ministry in the face of competing requests and desires and provide a legacy opportunity that will allow children all around the world the opportunity for belonging and the experience of learning Christian faith and love becoming those who serve others and passes on Jesus' teachings to the next generation who, in turn, will pass it on to the next generation, and so on. An organization with a mission society mindset focused on generations not geography.

- Level 2: We offer our stakeholders a new model for mission outreach finely-tuned for the younger generation called Swamp Corps, which includes the following portfolio of unique attributes and processes:

- Home-grown Personnel. Well-trained, youth-focused personnel.

Swamp Corps has full-time, dedicated directors who are trained in camp specific environments supported by a staff with years of exposure, many of whom grew up within the Swamp Camp culture.

- Swamp Camp Mission & 10 Core Values. Steeped in Biblical truths and principles, this mission and core values define the Swamp Camp spiritual culture and direct the behaviors of the staff; the character-essence of Swamp Camp and the foundation for training of all Swamp Corps sites. They are as follows:

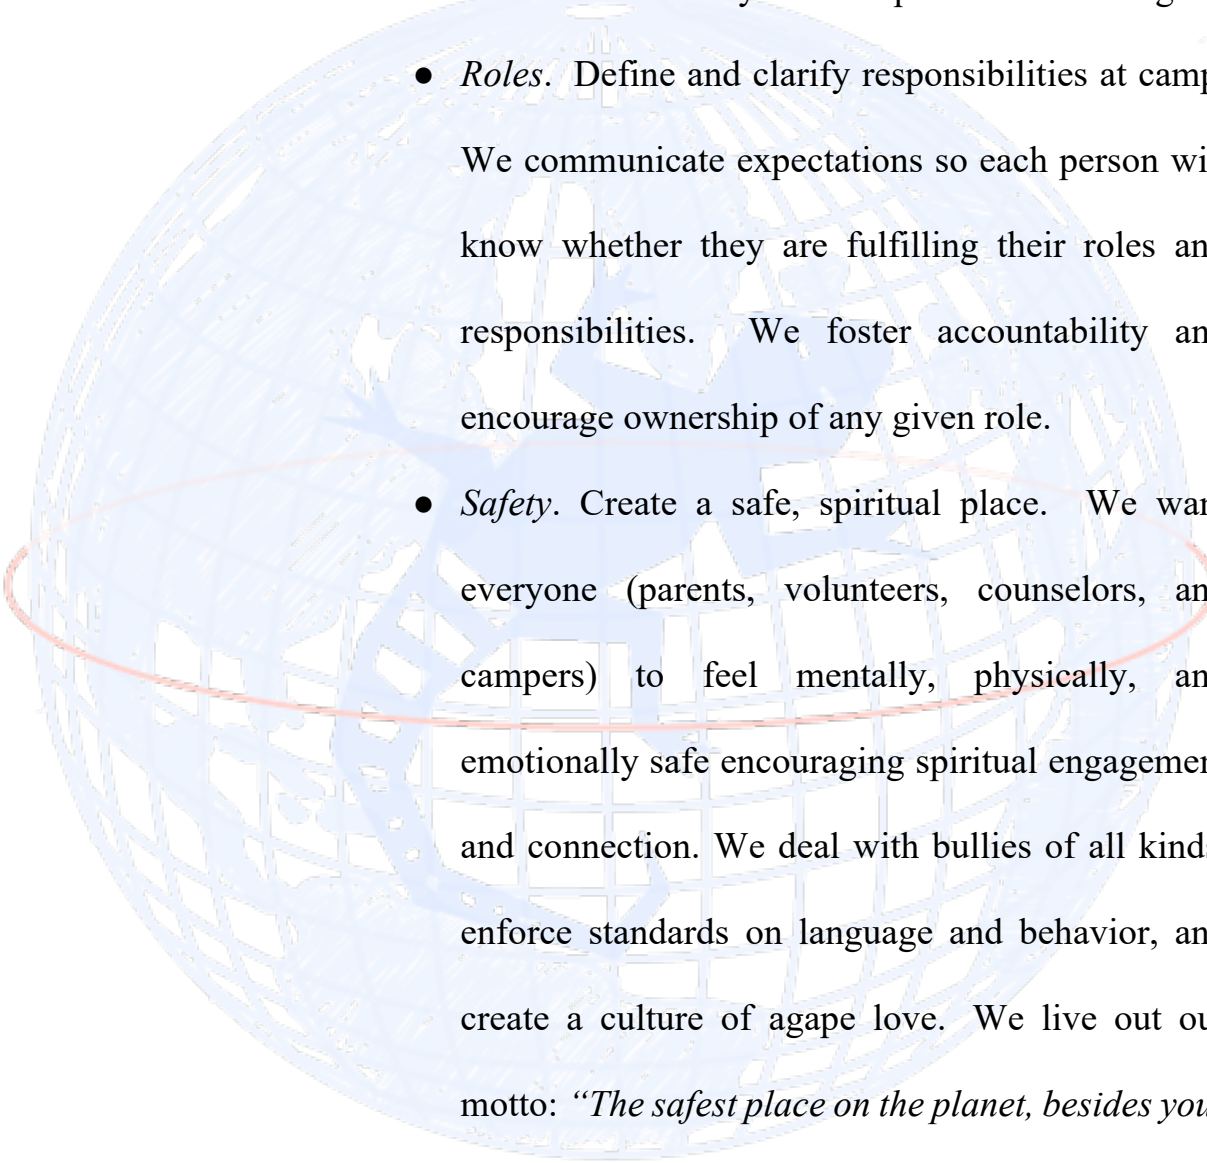

- Mission. A Little Slice of Heaven: Partnering with God to create a safe, spiritual space for belonging and learning through play, connection, community, and wonder.

- 10 Core Values

- YHWH. Always point towards God. We believe that God is powerful, faithful, compassionate, gracious, and abounding in love. As we witness God revealing himself through the Bible, nature, and relationships, we steer away from outward compliance and allow each person the space and time for wonder, curiosity, and wrestling for personal faith.
- Differences. Accept and celebrate differences! We embrace different talents, interests and quirks whether athletic, scholarly, musical, or other, including domino expert, hula hoop champion, or avid book reader.
- Food. Provide good food. We create palatable (pun intended) memories around delicious food and yummy canteen / tuck-shop treats. We promote mealtimes as special gatherings of our community.

- Fun. Have fun! We prioritize smiles, laughter, and playfulness as we offer activities that engage a wide age-range of participants considering their interests and needs when planning activities and events. We never have fun at the expense of others remembering that no one will want to come back if it is not fun.
- Investment. Give to Camp. We partner together to give one hundred percent love, energy, attention, time, and money towards fulfilling camp's mission. We always think, plan, and train with an eye to future generations.
- Leadership. Lead strongly and humbly. We articulate clear rules, boundaries, and expectations to counselors, campers and volunteers, and enforce them consistently and fairly. We cultivate a safe spiritual space for everyone to learn to lead like Jesus.

- Respect. Create a culture of value. We hold every image bearer of Christ in high esteem, no matter their age or their station in life. We prioritize a culture where everyone is important and belongs.
 - Roles. Define and clarify responsibilities at camp. We communicate expectations so each person will know whether they are fulfilling their roles and responsibilities. We foster accountability and encourage ownership of any given role.
 - Safety. Create a safe, spiritual place. We want everyone (parents, volunteers, counselors, and campers) to feel mentally, physically, and emotionally safe encouraging spiritual engagement and connection. We deal with bullies of all kinds, enforce standards on language and behavior, and create a culture of agape love. We live out our motto: “The safest place on the planet, besides your home.”
 - Spirituality. Have a spiritual camp not a religious camp. We recognize the difference between the two. We trust the Holy Spirit to work through play, connection, community, and wonder.

○ Seven Key Program Elements:

- Teams or Cabins. Young people are assembled in teams by age to augment peer-to-peer relationships; check-in includes the relinquishing of all electronics for a cell-free zone.
- Counselors.
 - 99% of whom have previously attended at least one or more years at a Swamp Camp thereby knowing the Swamp Camp culture and behavioral expectations and being individually known and trusted by the directors.
 - Assigned to teams with a 1:7 or less counselor to camper ratio, fostering close, influential connections.
 - Carefully screened (background checks, multiple references, and interviews), and trained to work with young people.

- Service. Each team/cabin serves daily at camp teaching both servanthood and contributing to the greater camp community.
 - Classes. Daily age-appropriate classes are offered with a curriculum emphasizing increased Biblical knowledge, character exploration, and spiritual growth.
 - Games. Daily activities are planned to encourage teamwork, physical education, and strategies for unity; often packaged as what is traditionally known as Challenges (where one team invites another team in an agreed-upon contest with a fun, winner-chosen consequence for the loser (i.e. eat with no hands, marker make-over, hug a tree, etc.)
 - Public Expression. Four weekly assemblies (the Singing Devotional, the Ring of Honor, the Mingle of Honor and the Grateful Devotional) are devoted to public expression of relationship, character and faith, offering the values of confidence, self-expression, and the power of positive reinforcement. These events are designed to offset many of the participants' negative school, family, or community situations.

- Perspective. One session, the Starlight Devotional, is held under the stars and centers on the vastness of the cosmos and bigness of God—helping participants to understand that there is no other place or species known like us and that they are special and have a unique and sacred role to play in all of nature and are uniquely special to the Creator.

- Proprietary processes:

- Counselor Recruiting:

- Starting at a young age as campers, future counselors experience first-hand the spiritual, safe Swamp Camp culture allowing the 10 Core Values to integrate into their faith and character in contrast to other camps who import temporary staff who may be less familiar with the camp culture and less personally known to the directors.
 - Utilizing this type of counselor recruiting allows the Swamp Camp directors to know the counselors on a deeper level developing the trust and partnership ensuring a safer and more enriching environment for the camper, counselor, and greater assurances for the parents and guardians.

- Age Eligibility Range of Campers. Swamp Corps hosts campers from 9-18 years of age during all sessions of summer camp and Swamp Corps events. Older campers learn to be heroes and role-models to younger campers; younger campers teach the older campers the joy of a child-like heart and help the atmosphere to be light and fun.

- S.A.L.T. Training Tracks & Modules.

- S.A.L.T. offers the following tracks and modules for the Older and Younger Generation with the objective of personal transformation resulting in individual reorientation towards each other fostering the Bridge Building process.

- Next Generation Track

- Module 1: Going from Kingdom Kid to Kingdom Leader

- Module 2: Moving from an Extrinsic to an Intrinsic Motivation: How God, the Father, Sees You.

- Older Generation Track

- Module 1: Going from Kingdom Leader to Kingdom Partner: An Inside View of What the Younger Generations Wants You to Know.
- Module 2: God's Parenting Advice: Moved by Memories.

- Level 3: We offer our stakeholders well-designed, Spirit-led programs offering a multi-day camp experience and leader-focused educational encounters that lead to transformation. Each moment is integrated with the features of Level 2 having purpose and cumulatively building on itself in order to accomplish the outcomes of the vision: for campers to feel loved, see God and have fun; and for counselors to find belonging, receive training and learn the ministry of Jesus. This emphasizes that there is an underlying mentality of our mission. For example, the Swamp Corps methodology is founded on the uniqueness of our mentality statement: "We are in the connection business offering a fun camp experience, not the summer camp business offering connections.”

This way of thinking emphasizes the root reason for each of our activities and interactions: connection with God and His creation; connection with other people we don't know, deeper connection with people we do know, and even connection with our very self as His beloved creation made in His image. Our camps are relational-based camps not activity-based camps, built on the one thing that never fails: love. Counselors are trained, that the only real mistake is not loving their campers; other mistakes are useful for teaching and correcting, but, if a camper is not loved, then we have lost the ability to fulfill our vision and values, perhaps even our reason for existing.

- Level 4: Referred to by a Thought Leader Brand as the Powerful Position; whereby, we have the ability to influence the choices of a stakeholder. We realize that other alternatives exist for stakeholders, but, at this level, we have the majority of the influence in that we offer a sustainable, proven path of connection with the younger generation and direct line of sight to the results of investments. This coupled with more than a decade and a half of outcome data showing sustainability offers an Older Christian or a Community Christian Organization assurance of a return on their investment and a future legacy.

- Level 5: The pinnacle at which S.C.M.A. hopes to hold with each stakeholder: that we are the go-to alliance experience; stakeholders help promote and market S.C.M.A. and working together with S.C.M.A. to accomplish the mission. We are invited to speak and teach regarding the work we do and how we do it. With the goal of being a recognized Thought Leader Brand, we want to be in the minds of each stakeholder holding out and sharing the Unique Genius of S.C.M.A. as the premier mission outreach experience for reaching the younger generations. IF YHWH so desires.

5. What is Our Market Position Goal?

Once each level is confirmed for the various stakeholders, then the goal and focus driving our next right steps is the next level above. For example, due to its relatively short existence, S.C.M.A. will be in Level 1 position. What will it take to propel us to Level 2 in the minds of our stakeholders? The Executive Management Team along with the Board of Directors will need to evaluate our position and create a strategy to move towards Level 5.

6. What is Our Road Map for Creating and Sustaining Value?

This section draws from Alan Mullaly's Working Together Management System™ and is tailored for S.C.M.A. operations. This management system revolves around the Mission which is protected and sustained by understanding the broader context of the operating environment; a comprehensive operating strategy; performance measures relative to stakeholders value and market position, and a consistent Mission Plan Review highlighting setbacks, successes, and continuous improvement. Below is an illustration tailored for S.C.M.A.:

S.C.M.A. CREATING VALUE ROAD MAP

Moving forward, the organization as a whole (led by the Executive Management Team) will give attention to each of the listed parameters forming a comprehensive, well thought-out operating plan. Department heads will provide supportive plans which smoothly integrate into the larger system. It is also expected that each involved person knows the plan and relentlessly holds to it ensuring that each parameter relates back to the overall vision and creates value for the stakeholders. The Mission Plan Review (MPR) will entail the exploration and establishment of the key parts listed in the diagram above.

7. How Do We Concisely and Precisely Articulate the Value Offered to Each Stakeholder?

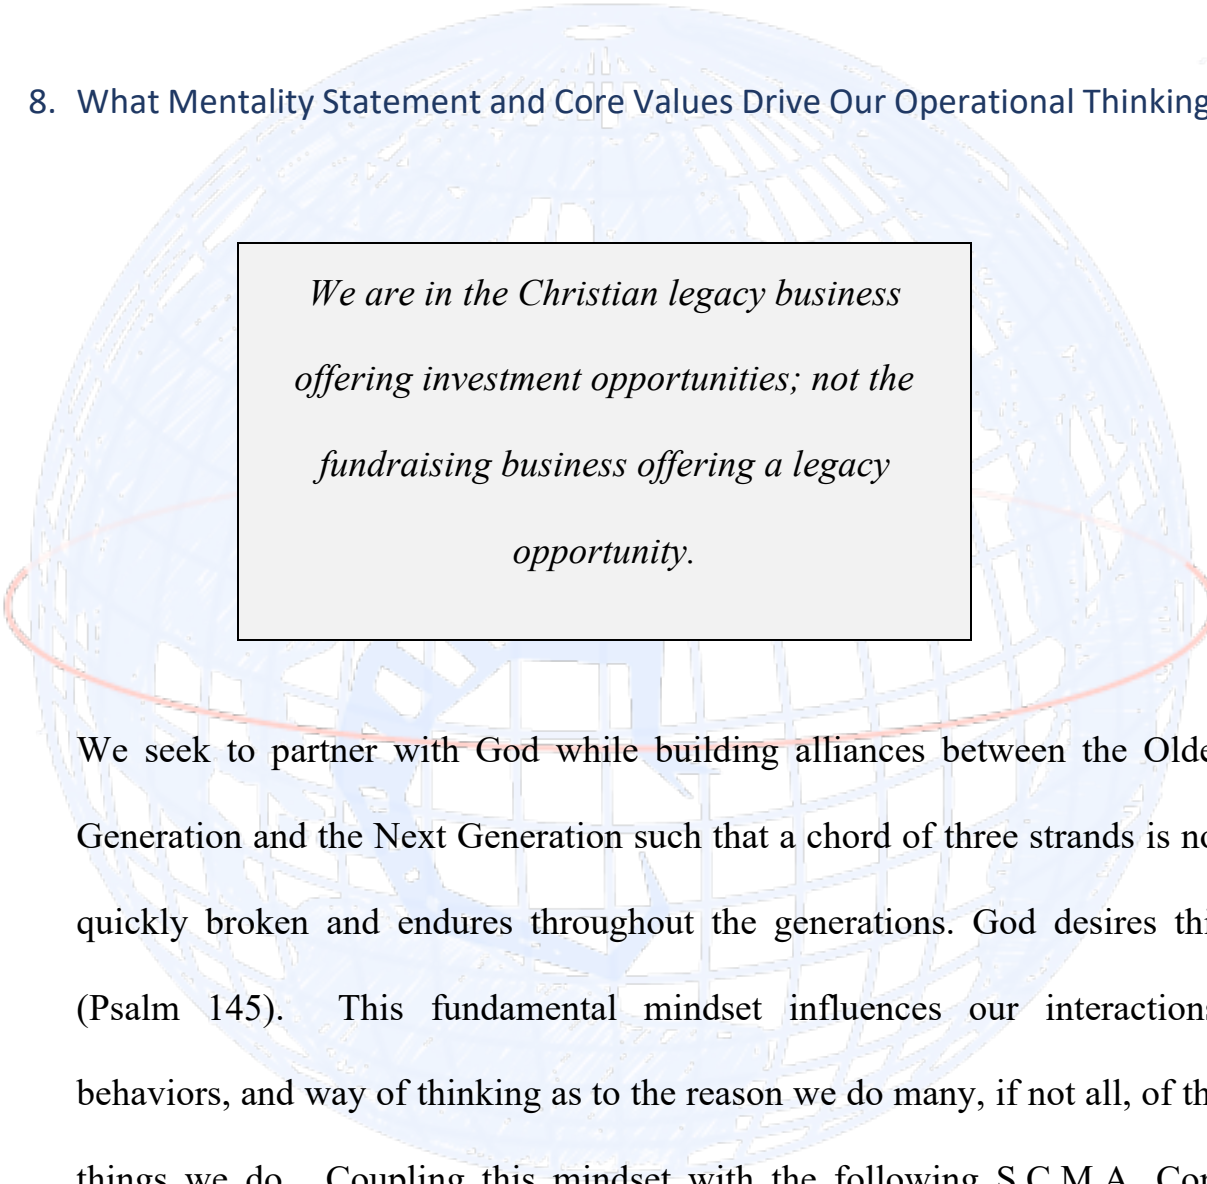

Salespersons constantly search for concise statements to convey what they do and how their product or service stands out. Many times this turns into an “elevator speech,” which typically describes who and what; or a “unique selling point,” which offers distinction; or a “value proposition,” offering a persuasive, transformative selling point. Combining the elevator speech and the unique selling point creates demand; combining the elevator speech with the value proposition creates awareness; combining the value proposition with the unique selling point creates position. Per Mel Abraham’s Value

Distinction Paradigm™, we want all three to create value distinction, leading to a concise and precise marketing statement articulating the value a stakeholder receives. The Value Statement should refer back to the Mission, be specific for that stakeholder, and offer a distinction as compared to an alternative a stakeholder may be entertaining. Here are the Value Statements for our stakeholders (in bold):

- We help Older Christians partner with a proven process so that they can participate in unprecedented mission outreach among the youth, unlike outdated or unrelatable models, through an alliance with Swamp Corps and S.A.L.T.
- We help Christian Organizations (mission societies, churches, small groups, Faith-based groups, and the like) by offering a solution to the “how-do-we-make-space-for-the-younger-generation” problem bridging the generation gap and improving generational partnerships, unlike traditional and, possibly, outdated church programs and activities, via our unique spiritual camp culture established by our missionary arm, Swamp Corps.
- We help Swamp Corps reach its financial goals so that they can continue to establish Swamp Camps where ever they are invited, unlike typical one-off mission trips, that are locally sustained and globally supported.

- We help the Younger Generation find their place in the broader Christian movement by creating a space for belonging and learning so that they can play their part in passing on faith and biblical values.

8. What Mentality Statement and Core Values Drive Our Operational Thinking?

We are in the Christian legacy business offering investment opportunities; not the fundraising business offering a legacy opportunity.

We seek to partner with God while building alliances between the Older Generation and the Next Generation such that a chord of three strands is not quickly broken and endures throughout the generations. God desires this (Psalm 145). This fundamental mindset influences our interactions, behaviors, and way of thinking as to the reason we do many, if not all, of the things we do. Coupling this mindset with the following S.C.M.A. Core Values lays a strong internal foundation for our operations and behaviors:

Core Values:

- Spirit-led. Shadow the Spirit. We believe in balancing times to wait with willingness to act per the Spirit's direction.
- Collaboration. Count on connections. We rely on the power of partnerships and the strengths and talents of the many versus the one.
- Mission-Driven. Move to the mission. We believe in our mission utilizing its short- and long-term benefits as a guiding compass.
- Alliance-Happy. Build bridges. We are the happiest when we see the open arms of acceptance, the space for new ideas, and the investment of resources flowing between the generations.

9. What Are Our Policies, Practices, and Expected Behaviors to Create a Container for Productive Work?

- PEOPLE ARE FIRST...LOVE UP ON THEM. We will treat each stakeholder professionally, courteously, and with dignity and respect that every person craves.
- INVITE EVERYONE'S VOICE. Some of the best ideas are out there; also, the more we listen the more likely a stakeholder will feel invested. When people feel personally invested in the outcome, performance improves, collaboration grows.

- COMPELLING MISSION, COMPREHENSIVE STRATEGY, RELENTLESS IMPLEMENTATION. Our work has meaning and brings hope; the mission and values are worth the commitment. The strategy needs to be robust and articulate enough to ensure the sustainability of the mission; it will take each of our commitments to make the mission a reality. Relentless implementation of our strategy requires that every component is persistently executed, measured, and tracked using the Mission Plan Review (MPR).
 - CLEAR PERFORMANCE GOALS. We will be as clear as possible on what the goal is, why it is present, and how it relates to the success of the mission.
 - ONE PLAN. There is one plan and everyone will clearly understand it; each department will have plans and goals that align with the One Plan. No multiple, inconsistent, or competing plans.
 - FACTS AND DATA. They set us free no matter how positive or negative they appear. We can't manage a secret. Using objective data allows us to move forward confidently.
 - EVERYONE KNOWS THE PLAN, STATUS, AND AREAS THAT NEED SPECIAL ATTENTION. When this happens, our chances of success succeed exponentially. We will use various color-coded Red-Yellow-Green systems to clearly indicate current status and progress. On-plan goals are coded green; those failing but the issues are known are yellow; and those failing with no plan are red. In a matter of minutes, everyone knows where we are with regard to the plan. Problems are welcomed “gems” that the team can tackle together.

- PROPOSE A PLAN WITH A POSITIVE, “FIND-A-WAY” ATTITUDE. Your outlook informs your results. Collaborate with your team to create a plan to circumvent unwanted results. Mistakes happen: let’s learn from them. Ideally we plan for no mistakes, while making room for new ones; thus not repeating any of them. This way we always entertain the better plan; however, let’s be sure not to give away better in the attempt at best.
- RESPECT, LISTEN, HELP, AND APPRECIATE EACH OTHER. This is rooted in humility and service, bedrocks of our individual spiritual lives. Spend time with each other filling in a blank so we develop community with relationships equal or greater than the partnership.
- EMOTIONAL RESILIENCE—TRUST THE PROCESS. If we believe, then we can rest well knowing that the Spirit and our teammates have our back. Love never fails.

- HAVE FUN—ENJOY THE JOURNEY AND EACH OTHER.

There is nothing like working together to achieve a common goal, especially a heavenly one. You are professionals, yes! Be sure then to have fun at a professional level. Yes, never have fun at someone else's expense. Fun and laughter are outward signs of a safe environment (as we know from a week at camp, hey?!) in which the rewards and “gems” will naturally surface allowing us to fully appreciate each other's talents and ushers in the child-like motivation we all need.

These practices and policies are an internal supplement to and a reflection of our key Core Values and, in some respects, are their fruit. Become intimate with them, talk about them often, applaud them when you see them in action. When we work together using them, we can and will have so much fun and success serving our stakeholders.

10. How Will We Conduct Mission Plan Reviews Expressing Setbacks and Successes to Continuously Improve the Management System Solutions and Objectives While Ensuring We Consistently and Precisely Determine Our Right Next Steps?

Starting from the inside out, we will conduct ourselves with the utmost humility so that issues can be addressed as resolutely and quickly as possible.

We can't manage secrets. We will recognize and applaud vulnerability. With this quality, we will find the hand of God in all our successes, while enjoying the satisfaction He allows us as a partner. With this mindset, the Mission Plan Review process is carried out in four critical meetings. Each meeting serves a unique purpose.

i. The Mission Plan Review Process.

- Mandatory Attendance: Executive Management Team
 - Team Members (Current Occupant):
 - Executive Director (Jeff Rorabaugh)
 - Communications Director (Shikha Lagali)
 - Africa Training Director (Rodwell Mugochi)

- Asia Training Director (John Britto)
- Central/South America Training Director (Open)
- Development Committee Chair (Lee Redd)
- Business Administrator (Karen Todd)

- Team meetings last 30-90 minutes every week, on the same day, at the same time.
- The Executive Director will deliver the introduction and the final summary of changes in the status of the plan.
- Metrics that are relevant to the overall performance of the organization and crucial to the vision will be presented.
- Each metric will be color-coded: on-plan or above is green, below-plan-problem-known is yellow, drastically below-plan-issue-not-known is red.
- Meeting Objectives:
 - For the leadership team to know how S.C.M.A. is performing within the plan towards fulfilling the Mission.
 - Once known, the team will together identify areas that require individual and collective special attention.
 - The departmental MPR is for leaders and members of that department to know exactly how the department is performing against the plan and together identify areas that require individual and collective special attention at the departmental level.

- Meeting Environment:

- A trusting and safe one that results in transparency and openness.
- No requirement or pressure to present an array of green-colored charts and pretend nothing is wrong.
- Healthy MPR environments have a mix of colors; can't fix what we don't know.
- A weekly guest is welcomed, invited by a different manager.

- Organization-wide Meeting Agenda:

- Prayer Tithe
- Reminder of Purpose of Management System
- Go through the Principles, Practices, & Expected Behaviors
- Visit the S.C.M.A. Creating Value Road Map
- Conduct the MPR
- Summarize the Overall Plan and Status

- Departmental Meeting Agenda:

- Prayer Tithe
- Go through the Principles, Practices, & Expected Behaviors

- Review the Department's Vision
- Go Through the Department's Plan and Status
- Assess Risks and Opportunities
- Highlight Status of Special Attention Items
- Review Week Over Week Qualitative Summary

ii. Special Attention Meeting (SAM)

- Mandatory Attendance: Executive Management Team and necessary departmental personnel for designated SAM category.
- Each of the items in the SAM agenda will derive from a MPR.
- SAM items will be sorted into the following categories (Owner & Leader of Meeting):
 - Safety & Quality Experience (Program Director)
 - Internal Administrative Process Improvement (Administrator)
 - Strategy: Budget & People (Executive Director or Communications/Marketing Manager)
 - Risk Management (Chair of Board and Executive Director)
- SAM will last for two hours to eliminate ad hoc meetings.
- Functions as an organized brainstorming session with the team working collaboratively until problems are resolved.

- When a resolution (or at least a solution path) has been identified, the relevant leader will draft a plan to execute it, delegate those responsibilities, and incorporate the information into the next MPR report.

11. How Do We Monitor and Maintain Expectations and Camp Culture Across Each Camp Established Via Swamp Corps?

In order to address the desire to maintain our unique camp culture across all Swamp Corps brand camps, two main processes happen:

i. Swamp Corps Training

Swamp Corps is a process under the arm of S.C.M.A.. Its overarching purpose is to replicate the unique Swamp Camp culture by establishing Swamp Camps for children around the world. Our process objectives are:

1. To establish a perennial summer camp endorsed, supported and sustained by the host community.
2. To extend service-learning opportunities to youth 14 years of age and older.

3. To offer an overnight camp program, for youth ages 9-18, designed to fulfill the Swamp Camp Mission in a memorable, fun-filled fashion within the host community.

Swamp Corps goes where it is invited. Once an invitation is accepted, Swamp Corps will dedicate resources such as training, planning, experienced campers, competent counselors, an established registration process, and seasoned leadership for three (3) successive years with each year representing a new stage in the training process described as follows:

- Phase I: Swamp Corps will totally run the camp establishing expectations and planting the initial seed of culture.
- Phase II: Swamp Corps will co-lead the camp while training and coaching leaders, re-affirming expectations, and cultivating the camp culture as stated in the Swamp Camp Mission & 10 Core Values.
- Phase III: Swamp Corps will provide support and evaluation of the host-led event and provide a detailed plan to fill identified gaps.

The ultimate goal is to inculcate the Swamp Camp culture in the host community and to see it sustained on a perennial basis for generations to come.

ii. Swamp Camp Mission Alliance Licensing Agreements

As a part of its services, each host church is given the opportunity to connect with S.C.M.A. in one of the following two operating options:

Option 1: Affiliation in Partnership. This is a contractual agreement between S.C.M.A. and the host camp governing body (church) whereby use of S.C.M.A. intellectual properties and proprietary processes is granted under a limited Licensing Agreement. All operating risk is assumed by the host governing body (church). Ongoing training and consulting is available.

Option 2: Independent Affiliation. The host governing body (church) has decided to take on full responsibility and risk for the operation and there is no legal connection to S.C.M.A. after the completed training period. There is no Licensing Agreement and no use of S.C.M.A. intellectual property or proprietary processes other than those used and agreed upon as a normal part of operations passed on during the training.

Directors of S.C.M.A. affiliated Swamp Camps who choose to franchise and affiliate with S.C.M.A. are expected to adhere and duplicate a value-driven management system in the like manner in order to ensure sustainability and accountability of the Swamp Camp Mission and 10 Core Values.

12. How Do We Remain Consistently and Relentlessly Spirit-Led?

Psalm 38:15. “LORD, I wait for you; you will answer, Lord my God.”

Psalm 20:7. “Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we trust in the name of the LORD our God.”

1 Corinthians 2:9-16. “However, as it is written, ‘What no eye has seen, what no ear has heard, and what no human mind has conceived’—the things God has prepared for those who love him—these are the things God has revealed to us by his Spirit. The Spirit searches all things, even the deep things of God. For who knows a person’s thoughts except their own spirit within them? In the same way no one knows the thoughts of God except the Spirit of God. What we have received is not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit who is from God, so that we may understand what God has freely given us. This is what we speak, not in words taught us by human wisdom but in words taught by the Spirit, explaining spiritual realities with Spirit-taught words. The person without the Spirit does not accept the things that come from the Spirit of God but considers them foolishness, and cannot understand them because they are discerned only through the Spirit. The person with the Spirit makes judgments about all things, but such a person is not subject to merely human judgments, for, 'Who has known the mind of the Lord so as to instruct him?' But we have the mind of Christ.

Sometimes we wait; more times we listen; all times we trust as we follow The Great Thought Leader. Waiting, listening, trusting come from a connection with God. The Swamp Camp Mission Alliance Value-Driven Management System is filled with activities, goals, choice points, facts, data, plans and meetings—things grounded in this finite world fitted for a finite operation; and could be just another observation-based, human-dependent system. Not so if we stay connected with God. We will wait, listen, trust, remember our why, and love the Mission into reality through a relationship with the Almighty. This is our individual number one priority; no matter what! If we take care of our monastery, God will take care of our ministry. If we take care of the depth of our ministry, God will take care of the breadth of it...this includes the Swamp Camp Mission Alliance Value-Driven Management System. May it be so with us so it can be so for the generations to come as we're constantly Spirit-led; they are counting on us.

IV. CLOSING SUMMARY

Swamp Camp Mission Alliance is growing and, subsequently, will have associated pains; Swamp Corps is seasoned and my experience dilution and stagnation; S.A.L.T. is an infant and might cry a lot. The founding of Swamp Camp Mission Alliance and the S.C.M.A. Value-Driven Management System are offered as an aide with solutions. Its implementation will take a relentless focus, but the fruit will allow us to communicate better, orient activity towards fulfilling the Mission at a deeper level, focus on growth-oriented activities, address matters needing special attention in a timely and thorough manner, and result in a container for working together; it will also deepen our connections with stakeholders now and into the future garnering the generations to come for the work God has planned for them and us.

To this end we labor in love; to this end, we humbly bow.

For this reveals why heroes are so critically needed now.

Thank you for being a hero.
